

to do the research and those who are to sponsor it. And, finally for this dozen, entering into the world of research for some may result in a kind of disorientation, loss of confidence and fear of exposing real or imagined shortcomings. These need to be anticipated, recognized and overcome in order to assure joint and reciprocal motivation and confidence between researchers and sponsors.